

About Rinnai Tankless Water Heaters

Water heaters are the 3rd largest consumers of energy in the home. With a Rinnai tankless water heater you are only heating the water demanded, meaning there is no pilot light constantly burning, wasting energy while trying to heat a tank full of water, just waiting for the next time you turn on the valve for hot water at your sinks. A typical gas fired tankless water heater costs less than a standard tank water heater. However it will pay for itself in just a few years or less, and will last twice as long as a tank.

One of the best incentives of a tankless water heater is the endless supply of hot water. A Rinnai tankless water heater not only conserves energy, it also saves space that a traditional tank water heater would take up.
